

The PARTNER 2 Study: a study for sero-different gay couples

Understanding the risk of HIV transmission
when the HIV+ partner is on therapy

HIV positive with a negative partner?
HIV negative with a positive partner?

A study is looking at the impact HIV treatment has on reducing the risk of HIV transmission. While everyone wants to know these risks, there are hardly any accurate studies.

The PARTNER study is looking for gay couples where one partner is HIV negative and the other is HIV positive and on treatment. The study will also look at the different patterns of condom use. All information from the study will be anonymised and will be in confidence.